great sightlines

When the view's this good, you want nothing to detract from it. The owners of this contemporary Santa Fe residence opted for clean, unfussy finishes and high-end materials in their kitchen, which captures unobstructed Sangre de Cristo views through a single picture window. "There's a lot of symmetry here," says Kurt Faust, a partner with Tierra Concepts, Inc., the award-winning builder of the home. Indeed, a center axis runs from the kitchen to the living room fireplace, centered on the striking Lindsey Adelman globe chandelier. Just off the kitchen a pantry hides small appliances, so that the only things in sight are immaculate countertops and jaw-dropping mountain scenery.

Honey-colored, flat front cabinetry softens and warms the black soapstone countertops and Carrera marble island and backsplash. The huge picture window, drawing in breathtaking Sangre de Cristo views, no doubt makes mealtime cleanup a completely painless process.
